Summary

- Except for BET-FI, BVB's indices finished in the red yesterday; deals made up half of the equities 'turnover
- The IMF will extend the standby agreement by 3M
- Following the increased size of the weekly repo amount, MM rates started falling

Almost all indices at BVB finished in the red yesterday, except for BET-FI (+0.2%). Total equities' turnover was higher than the previous day and stood at 7.8 mn EUR. In Europe, there was a mixed evolution as well, but DAX and FTSE 100 gained 0.2% and 0.7% respectively. Strong demand for Italian bonds at yesterday's auction, good German data and the news that banks will repay to the ECB more than expected strengthened investors' confidence about the eurozone. Therefore, movements from less riskier assets to equities are seen. All investors are eyeing Fed's meeting and the Fed is expected to continue with the loose monetary policy. Back to the domestic market, more than half of yesterday's liquidity was made on the deals market. Since the beginning of the year, BET has gained 7.3% and BET-C is up 6.7%.

The IMF will extend the current standby agreement by 3M, a press release stated. According to the Fund's evaluation, 2012 GDP growth has been "almost flat". In 2013, growth is expected to come from domestic demand. Also, the Fund estimates that the ESA budget deficit has been under 3%, as planned.

As expected, after the increase in repo size by the Central Bank, the money market rates started falling. ROBOR ON was down 87 bp to 6.09% yesterday. The 5Y CDS (euro contracts) continues to decline and it stood at 175 bp yesterday.
