Summary

- BVB indexes closed mixed yesterday and opened up this morning, after the rally seen in Europe and the US post Draghi comments; German macro data released this morning came out lower than economists' consensus
- July banking statistics data showed that private loans dropped 3.4% YoY while private deposits are building up (+6.9% YoY); the dynamics of corporate deposits suggests private investment is yet far from taking off; private loan to depo ratio fell below 1.

Domestic equity indexes finished mixed yesterday whereas in Europe and the US we have seen stocks continuing to be boosted by expectations that the ECB would indeed fight deflation and proceed to stimulus measures. US macro data came out strong as well, with US durable goods orders growing at 22.6% YoY in July, compared to economists' consensus of 8% YoY. US consumer confidence index for August was strong as well, at 92.4 compared to expectations (89) and the previous month when the reading was 90.3. This morning, the domestic market opened up as well, lagging yesterday's international rally. However, on the macro field, the data is poor this morning as German GFK consumer confidence reading (Sep) is lower than the previous month and the consensus.

Banking statistics data for July revealed that lending flows are getting weaker and the foreign currency denominated loan stock is dropping even faster, in the case of corporations (-13% YoY, original currency) and households segment as well (-9% YoY, original currency). Lending in leu paces up. Mortgage loans were up 8.3% YoY in July versus 7% YoY in the previous month, of which RON denominated mortgages tripled in a year. Consumer loans fail to take up (-8.9% YoY). Overall, private lending dropped 3.4% YoY in July while private deposits are building up, both the corporate (+10.5% YoY) and households (+4.8% YoY). Unfortunately, this signals that the reversing of the trend of private investments is not on the horizon yet. At this point, private loan to depo ratio has fallen below 1.
