Summary

- As expected, the ECB's Governing Council left its policy unchanged in yesterday's meeting.
- Asia's major indices closed in the red this morning.
- Crude oil prices fell more than 2% in Thursday's trading.
- The July Markit PMIs are due out in the eurozone and the USA today.

Thursday's most important event was the European Central Bank Governing Council's policy meeting, which left the benchmark interest rate in place at 0.0% and the key deposit rate at -0.4%, as it has been widely expected. Neither did it change the conditions of the current asset purchase programme, which may be revised in September. The quantitative easing programme will continue until March 2017, but it may be extended if reaching the inflation target necessitates that. Speaking of economic growth in the eurozone, the ECB maintained positive outlook with downward risks, saying the expansion may be slower in the second quarter than in the first. ECB President Mario Draghi reiterated what he said in April: in the bank's view, it would be very important to apply fiscal policy solutions on top of easing monetary conditions.

Europe's stock markets ended Thursday's trading near Wednesday's closing value, with the FTSE100's 0.4% drop being the worst loss. The DAX inched up 0.1%; its weakest component was Lufthansa, which nose-dived 6.0% after slashing its 2016 profit forecast. On Thursday EasyJet reported shrinking Q2 revenues, which reduced its share price by more than 5% yesterday. Earlier this morning trading halted for almost four hours at the London Metal Exchange, owing to technical outage; trading restarted just before 5:00 (CET).

The dominance of sellers on American markets made the key indices close in the red. The Dow's (-0.4%) weakest name was Intel (-2.8%) whose Q2 earnings figure were short of its own forecast.

Asia's indices ended today's session in negative territory, as investors were disappointed about the ECB's inaction despite Brexit. Sinking more than 1% made the Nikkei225 the loser of the day.

After the ECB's decision, the EUR made gains versus the USD but it ran out of steam by the time Europe's stock markets closed. Yet a slight firming led the EUR/USD to 1.1 at the end of the day.

Crude oil price slumped more than 2% in Thursday's trading. The WTI crude traded at 44.6 USD/barrel and the Brent stood at USD 46.1 at the end of the day.
