Global Daily Report

Summary

- Stock markets were ailing yesterday
- The USA repealed net neutrality rules
- The ECB became more optimistic about the eurozone's growth, but deems considerable monetary stimulus necessary.

Most stock markets of the world ended Thursday's session in the red. Markets shrugged off the cheering PMI readings released in Europe and America, as well as the European Central Bank's optimistic statements on Europe's prospects. However, the renewed uncertainty about the US tax reform has had its adverse effect on US stock markets. The Russell 2000, the index of small-cap shares, was hit the hardest, falling 1%. The S&P500 closed 0.6% down. The technology sector had to come to terms with the USA's revoking of an earlier regulation on net neutrality, which banned American internet service providers from discrimination in granting access to various online contents. This change benefits telecom companies that provide internet services, but may negatively affect companies that produce online content.

In the corporate world, the biggest news of the day was the agreement between Disney and 21st Century Fox: Disney will buy stakes worth USD 52.4 billion. The aim of the deal is to enable Disney to compete with online content providers. Walt Disney's shares marched 2.7% higher.

As expected, the European Central Bank left its key policy rate unchanged, and neither did it modify the parameters of its asset purchase programme. The ECB's latest forecast is more sanguine about the eurozone's growth prospects and expects a rise in inflation. That said, Mario Draghi's words suggest that still ample of monetary stimulus is required to sustain growth and to reach the inflation target. The euro's weakening sent the EUR/USD near 1.177.

Most of the purchasing managers' indices (PMI) released by Markit on Thursday surpassed expectations. US retail sales did well in November.

Today's important releases include US manufacturing PMI figures. Hungary will publish construction output statistics.
