Summary

- Most stock markets nudged higher on Thursday.
- With no agreement on the spending bill, the US government shutdown continues.
- The differences in the trade talks between America and China have not narrowed.
- The ECB's Governing Council met yesterday.

America's stock indices achieved small gains on Thursday, with the Nasdaq100 rising 0.7%, the S&P500 inching up 0.1%, while the Dow edged 0.1% lower. What influenced investors' behaviour was global growth fears, the USA-China trade conflict, and the 34-day-long government shutdown. In the corporate world, American Airlines sky-rocketed 6.4%, Southwest Airlines soared 6.3%, and JetBlue Airways gained 5.1%, all benefiting from stronger-than-expected profit and revenue figures in their Q4 reports. Europe's stock markets also picked up: the DAX advanced 0.5%, the CAC40 gained 0.7%, and the Stoxx600 increased by 0.2%; only the FTSE100 closed 0.4% down.

Speaking in an interview, US Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross said that the trade talks between the USA and China are 'miles and miles apart from getting a resolution'. Investors fear that the two countries fail to ink a deal by March, the deadline set by President Trump. Unless a new trade agreement is struck by then, the USA will raise the import tariffs on USD 200 bn worth of Chinese goods from 10% to 25%, the president warned.

On Thursday the US Senate rejected two bills, both aimed at re-opening federal government. Republicans' motion would have secured funding for the wall on the Mexican border, while Democrat's bills would have re-opened federal government without building a wall. Nevertheless, the positions of the two sides may be converging under the surface: Democrats are willing to adopt a new spending bill that secures USD 5.7 bn funding requested by the president – for border defence, rather than for building the wall, Reuters' sources said. In addition, Republicans may support the liberalization of legislation on illegal immigrants' children. Nevertheless, Donald Trump's speaker Sarah Huckabee Sanders made it clear that the President would back only a proposal that secures the budget for building the wall. Thus the US political stalemate and the government shutdown, the effects of which are beginning to impact the economy, are likely to continue.

The European Central Bank's Thursday meeting left interest rates on hold, as expected. At the subsequent press conference, President Mario Draghi touched upon the intensifying downside risks to the economy. While acknowledging the fact of deceleration, he did not rule out that this might be a temporary effect, arguing that the labour market and domestic demand were both strong. Mr Draghi struck a fairly optimistic tone about Brexit, which was unlikely to hurt the eurozone's economy. Based on the press conference, the ECB might need more time to find how persistent the factors that pose downside risks to economic outlook will be.

Yields on the USA's and Germany's 10Y government bonds sank four and five basis points, respectively.

Following the ECB's press conference, the US dollar's firming pushed the EUR/USD 0.7% lower.

The January reading of the Markit purchasing managers' index (PMI) for a number of countries was published on Thursday. Germany's manufacturing PMI hit 49.9, missing the previous month's 51.5 gauge, but the services sector PMI has risen. Regarding the whole of the eurozone, the manufacturing and services sector PMI undershot the December figures, which may intensify fears that economic growth is slowing.

Germany's IFO economic sentiment index and the US durable goods orders data are due out today.
