Summary

- The encouraging speech of Fed chairman Mr Powell helped yesterday's trading mood.
- The leu firmed to 4.65 compared to the euro.
- Yesterday the ROBOR 3M was flat at 3.35%.
- Romanian stocks finished mostly in positive territory.

The speech of Fed chairman Mr Powell in front of the Senate Banking Committee provided support for yesterday's buoyant trading sentiment. Mr Powell said that the 'best way forward is to keep gradually raising the federal funds rate for now', indicating that further rate hikes are in the pipeline but he also suggested that the Federal Reserve would not change its monetary policy too aggressively. Mr Powell painted an upbeat picture about the US economy, but noted that the potential impacts of trade discussions and changes to the fiscal policy are difficult to predict. On the news, the US dollar firmed around 0.4% against the euro.

The EUR/RON traded in a narrow range (4.6550-4.6600) most of the day, but Romania's leu started to rally late afternoon, pushing the cross back to 4.65. This corresponded to a modest single-day appreciation. This morning the EUR/RON remained stuck to the 4.65 mark. Elsewhere in the CEE region, currencies moved in mixed directions.

On Tuesday, the ROBOR 3M remained unchanged at 3.35%, while the benchmark yields on government securities showed little variation.

The comments of Fed chief about the US economy helped the main global stock indices to close in positive territory, while investors focused on the latest earnings reports too. Bucharest's equity benchmarks registered slight gains, with the exception of the BET-FI, which finished in the red. Among the BET's individual components, the shares of the BRD (+2.1%) and Nuclearelectrica (+2.1%) recorded the largest gains. Equities' total turnover was rather low, with trades amounting to RON 25.3 mn.
